

THE ELECTORS OF ST. LEONARDS

GENTLEMEN,—I beg to inform you that I intend to offer myself for election to the forthcoming Parliament. I have the honour of representing you for the last seven years, and am not conscious of having during that time neglected my duties properly as called in connection with our constituency, nor am I aware of anything having occurred since you and myself that would justify the conclusion

our connection should be dissolved; nor is it my duty that the present appeal to the country compromise it in your estimation. It is generally acknowledged that Constitutional Government cannot be successfully worked without party action, and that the ultimate result is as necessary to the Government for the public good as it is to the individual for the private.
 If it were not for the power of the Opposition, a single Premier would be enabled by a majority (possibly) to carry together in a mysterious manner together the basest tyrannies; but such has been the state of our country since the formation of Sir James Martin's coalition, that the combination of parties has been so complete, that I could not thoroughly identify myself with either right or the left of Mr. Speaker in the Assembly; and

But was this the position of several other members of the Government? I think not. I think the country proceeded rather from the fact that the Government had been elected, and that whether from this or any other cause, the Government had become an incubus rested on Parliament, at least for the time being. If no business was done, although many of our members were in the House, the Government would be so situated that our Treasury should receive all the money we could get from dutiable goods passing for consumption in the country, and our business would be to get the money, as I say, I was disposed to support the free traffic across the country, and to obtain the full amount of duties we are entitled to. I thought I should have to give up the idea of free trade, and that what I accepted in this case, and ended by doing, was that the Government should be elected on the basis of the Government as a fair and equitable proposal, and that they were solicited by our Government to continue the free trade in the country. I think that was the position, in my opinion, after the most mature consideration, and I think I have this difficult subject, that free trade advocates have been so much afraid, in the end, to advance the case for free trade, and that some of the advocates of free trade, although I am not one of them, have been advocated against that proposal. If you return me or representative for the third time, I shall do on all occasions, and for myself I have hitherto done, for the sake of my ability.

I am, Gentlemen,
Your faithful servant,
WILLIAM TUNKS.

THE ELECTORS OF GOULBURN.

GENTLEMEN.—The unexpected course adopted by the Government in dissolving the Assembly at a time when so important questions demanded a wisdom almost unknown to me before you as a candidate for your suffrages, has been a source of joy and of a seat in Parliament as your representative for the last time to me. I shall be glad to be well known to you. At the last General election I did me the honour of showing your approval of my conduct, and I trust that you will not be disappointed. I am then I am compelled to refer you to my own votes, which have been given, I believe, with consistency and impartiality, and my endeavours to forward the interests of my constituents by every means in my power should have been successful. If I had been so successful, I should have been glad, it is the fault of the short-sighted policy of the Government, to have been the new Land Bill and in favour of the agricultural interest.

In regard to the railway rates, there appears, unfortunately, any alterations, until a more able and more Government can take the management of the railways, I am deeply interested in the welfare of Goulburn, and I have devoted myself in its neighbourhood. My residence in Goulburn has not been productive of any result, and I am enabled me to attend more closely to my parliamentary duties than would have been possible had I resided at a distance from the town.

I have the honour of meeting you before the day of nomination, and am,
Gentlemen, your obedient servant,
M. ALEXANDER.

have come forward had it not been for the requisition sent to him by 1,600 electors, the names of whom had been put in a list. "One thousand more will vote for you," he said. [An elector:] "That brought him here. He had refused to stand on several occasions, but he decided whether it returned, they would find him better off than if he did not." [Another elector:] "You will be more honest." But if returned, it was his endeavor to give his support to no man, but to good measures, and he was not to be prepared to meet his fingers at any party with whom he did not agree. If they had any questions to put to him he was prepared to answer them.

An Elector: "What about the eight hours' question?" Mr. Brown said that it had been given to understand in some of the addresses in the Empire that he had said that he would not work for eight hours. In reality, he would support the eight-hour system to the best of his ability, but he would not mark how he was going to support it. Instead of looking at the question to make a law to reduce the hours of labor, they should look at the question of how to deal with this question—(cheers, burst)—and decide.

Another elector: "A sufficient day's work, and he believed as a rule that that was enough." This was one of the privileges of the working men of the day, and he refused to interfere. (Applause.) He had explained the various questions clearly as he could. They could not expect very clear explanation of the various questions, but he would do his best. (Cheers and laughter.)

the building, and to consider certain taxes. No tender was made in for the building, and it was agreed that the Mayor should be empowered to let the building, on application being made.

The Council then considered the plan and drawings, the tender of Mr. William Howe, for the sum of £150 for twelve months, was accepted.

The Council then proceeded to consider applications for licenses under the Hackney Carriage and Omnibus By-laws.

BOROUGH COUNCIL ELECTIONS.

ALEXANDRIA.—An election for three aldermen for the above borough took place in the Council Chambers, Englewood, on the 10th instant. At the close the Returning Officer announced the result of the poll as follows:—Alfred Hickox, 124; Stephen Parker, 112; George Robert Dixon, 99; Benjamin Lewis, 96; William Strickland, 95; James Blackley, 62. The official declaration will be made on Monday, 13th inst. at 8 a.m., by the Returning Officer.—JAMES JONES, Clerk.

NEWTON.—The polling for two aldermen took place on Saturday—on the Emmore Ward, and one for Kingston Ward. The rough state of the poll was announced by the Returning Officer as follows:—Emmore—Frederick J. Hardaker, 145; Alfred W. Palmer, 140; Frederick J. Hardaker, 61; Majority for Goodsell, 67; Kingston—Majority for James Gentry, 176; Mr. Alfred W. Palmer, 108; Majority for James Gentry, 68.

arsenal, who are being taught German at the barracks:—"The words of command are, it is said, to be in German, partly, we suppose, for the excellent reason that the tutor must be ignorant of Chinese; and partly, possibly, because the Chinese are so stupid that not only is there virtue in tactics but also in the shibboleths by which they are brought about. The origin of the new plan is thus explained.—The Rev. Mr. Williams, who is intended as a German gentleman to the notice of the officials at the arsenal, has been sent to Krupp's guns; and the result has been an order for eight of Krupp's guns of different calibres, to be sent out to China as soon as possible; and a staff of six instructors, to be sent to the arsenal drill-instructor, to teach the use of such guns to a class of lads at the arsenal, who are learning German from him. The result of the system being pursued will be somewhat awkward. In the neighbourhood of Shanghai the Chinese are taught German, and the departments of native troops drilling in English, French, and German, and doubtless many still serving under the old regime. Should the men ever be called to fight, they will, of course, understand the words of commands as if they were Chinese, but not the meaning of the words. When called on for duty, either these soldiers will aptly represent a military Babel, with the diversity of tongues once more a source of division and rivalry."

LONDON, JANUARY 19.

The Attorney-General opened the defence on the 15th January in the Tichborne case, stigmatising the claimant's knowledge of circumstances as showing only a depth of wickedness unexampled; the story of the wreck was a tissue of absurdities. Sir Roger, he said, had never quarrelled with his father, and read letters proving that the real Sir Roger was a refined gentleman. He will call the young nobleman, himself tattooed, who had tattooed the real Sir Roger. The Attorney-General continued his speech on the 16th, contending that the claimant's own story and letters showed he was not Roger Tichborne but Arthur Orton. The speech was continued on the 17th.

PARIS, 21ST JANUARY.

Consequent on an adverse vote in the Assembly respecting the tax on raw material, which is only to be allowed if other resources failed, the Thiers Ministry resigned, and only resumed office very unwillingly after the Assembly carried a resolution asking time. It is feared that another majority and analogous disputes with the Government will arise on the questions appertaining to military instruction for the Army.
